

About Propel Biofuels

Propel Biofuels is a privately-held biodiesel distribution and services company committed to serving our customers with the highest-quality biodiesel fuel and professional support. As a company:

- We believe in contributing to local economies by reducing dependence on petroleum, improving air quality in our communities, and addressing greenhouse gas emissions through action.
- We believe that fuel consumers deserve a choice and private sector-driven demand is the key to solving our global energy crisis.
- We believe total quality and support are required for market change, and we provide innovation and availability to markets in order to rapidly increase renewable fuel consumption.

Propel Biofuel's team of experts supplies a disparate and complex industry with business leadership.

Today, our business is made up of the following segments:

- Business fleet fuel supply, services and consulting
- A retail fuel station network
- Energy provider solutions
- Clean energy research and standards development
- Refinery design and build consulting
- Consumer education and promotion

Management

Propel Biofuels was founded in 2004 by Rob Elam and Michael Kudriavtseff. Today, Rob leads our expanded management team with support from Jim Sweeney, who joined Propel in 2005. Michael leads Propel's sales efforts. Our team has grown to include leading chemical engineers, air quality experts, and project managers.
